

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

The School of Social Work at the University of Texas at Arlington is a nationally recognized research leader committed to lifelong learning, self-reflection, personal growth, and professional development. As the largest social work school in Texas and the third most popular in the United States, UTA's School of Social Work aims to educate and cultivate leaders and scholars who are deeply dedicated to social change and service.

The School of Social Work has advanced society's understanding of community and has trained numerous social advocates who have improved millions of lives through awareness, education, interdisciplinary research, and evidence-based clinical practice.

Practicum education is fundamental to the school's mission. Students complete internships at over 400 local agencies, contributing about 540,000 hours of service each year—valued at an estimated $17 million in economic impact.

The school's faculty are active scholars, publishing more than 200 peer-reviewed articles annually, placing UTA in the 94th percentile for social work research productivity nationally. It is this research and service that continues to help changemakers make a difference right here in DFW and in communities across the country.
