Voter Discrimination

Early this week was another election in the state of Texas, with various constitution amendments. We have seen over the past years major changes in state policies affecting us all in various parts of our lives. It is easy to say, “you need to vote” “every vote counts” and harp on the importance of political participation, but we can’t gloss over the fact that voter suppression is a real issue that has been in place for generations. When issues exist at a systemic level it can be easy to shift the focus on the individual for the solution.

CNN has created a timeline of voting rights in the United States that highlights all the major points in history. Voting rights in the US is not a complete task, it is ever growing entity that will continue to grow and change shape as years continue and citizens grow and change over time.

CNN-Voting Rights

Right the ACLUTX is fighting for voter’s rights across the state. In counties with large black communities like Harris County, ballots had a higher rate of rejection than other counties with large white populations. It is important to know that there are groups out there always fighting for our rights. Check out the link below to see how you can join in the fight!

Student Spotlight

Cosette Eisenhauer, Undergraduate Student Leader

I was interested in being an Undergraduate Student Leader (USL) but to me, the word leader was a daunting word. When I think of the word “leader” I think of The President, people who are smart, People who sometimes assert themselves over people, people who are extroverts. But, then I remembered people in my life that I think are leaders and I recognized that people can be leaders if they want to help others, if they are introverts. Leaders are not just full of one type of people. If they were, so many voices would be drowned out.

I have been an Undergraduate Student Leader for 2 semesters and I have learned so much about the behind-the-scenes with admin, like anything it takes a community to help. We have 2-3 advisors and hundreds of students that want to be social workers. It takes a community of people to help serve the students who attend the School Of Social Work at UTA. Being a USL I have gained confidence in my writing and typing skills, I have gained friends throughout this program. I have also learned that it’s okay to not know all the answers! If you don’t know the answer you have a group of people who can help you!

That to me is an essential thing to learn as I’m going to school to be a Social Worker. It’s essential to remember that when you are out of school and in the field, you aren’t alone when you’re talking with clients, you have a community out there that can help you if you have an ethical question, you have a community to help you find resources. Being apart of the USL Program allowed me to really recognize that it is okay to ask for help. I will forever be thankful for the opportunity to grow and the grace that people have had with me. Because being a leader isn’t about being perfect. Being a leader is about learning how to ask for help and not knowing all the answers. You learn how to be a good leader through the USL Program.

Interested in being a USL volunteer this Spring? We need people like you! Apply here.

Book of the Week

Blackout: Remembering the Things I
Drank to Forget
By Sarah Hepola

Blackout is a memoir about the author Sarah Hepola, more specifically on her journey with alcohol use and her journey to sobriety. It talks about the realities of alcohol addiction, how college is a big part of it, and how many factors make it difficult to stay sober. Throughout the book, she mentions how society is a big factor on why she drank the way she did. She had many defining moments in her early years that affected her drinking habits. She tried to go sober many times throughout her life, but would break sobriety every time.

This book helped me understand alcohol addiction and how it can affect your daily life. The most important takeaway I had was that you shouldn't be ashamed of breaking sobriety, it's a journey that doesn't happen overnight and your attempts at sobriety is a big step. As a BSW student, I'm grateful for this book since it helped me understand alcohol addiction more on a personal level and it helped me be more prepared in my career when I work with clients who are going through alcohol addiction. I recommend this book as it is very engaging and informative.

Connections Lab

The Social Work Connections Lab was created by Dr. Diane Mitschke. We offer tutoring for social work students by social work students and can help with brainstorming and getting started, research and finding sources, writing and revising major assignments, APA citing and more. When in doubt, try us out.

You can book time with a tutor here. (If this link is giving you trouble, try opening it in an incognito window.) We offer appointments Mon-Sun virtually on teams and we look forward to seeing you soon.

We also created a course with tutorials and resources to help when you would rather work on your own, the Social Work Connections Lab Canvas Course.

To enroll, click here. (If you're brought to the Canvas login, login to Canvas and open the link again.) This course has guidance on APA, tutorials for specific writing assignments like the policy paper or the integrative seminar, and more. Once you enroll, click "Modules" to browse our offerings.

Field Placements & Tevera

Spring 2024 Field Application CLOSSES Nov 10th:

Field Applications:

Field applications opened on September 12th and is open until November 10th.

Don't delay! You must apply by the deadline, no exceptions, to start field in Spring 2024. If you are not starting field in Spring 2024, please ignore the notification about field applications opening and closing this semester.

If you have submitted an application already and receive reminders, you can ignore these emails, they do not apply to you. If you are currently in Split I of your placement this Fall, you do not need to re-apply to enter Split II in the Spring.

NOTE: If you are out of area send an email with your zipcode and your student ID and you will receive a list of affiliated agencies. Send an email to Amanda Land (amanda.land@uta.edu).

Tevera Fees:

You will have to pay the Tevera fee to access the Spring application. Tevera asks students from every school that uses their system to pay during the application phase instead of at the start of field.

You have options! You can pay Tevera directly out of pocket or you can purchase Tevera through the UTA bookstore and utilize financial aid. If needed, you can contact the financial aid office for additional aid to cover the cost of Tevera. (Note: Tevera is more expensive through the bookstore than a direct payment.)

*MSW Students Only

If you paid the lifetime InPlace fee for the first placement, you will still have to pay for Tevera for the second placement. We will no longer be accessing InPlace for field at UTA, only Tevera. Think of the Tevera fee as similar to paying for textbooks at the start of a course. Tevera is like your field textbook. We understand this still may be frustrating, but if you paid the lifetime InPlace fee, you will have that access forever and can provide proof of detailed Field hours completed for a license, certificate, or job if ever asked.

Field Orientation:

We are currently updating the Field orientation course in Canvas. But do not fret! You only need to complete this before your Spring Placement start date in mid January.
